Have you ever used a smartphone app to support your cancer journey?

Yes: 17%

No: 83%

Would you feel comfortable using an app to manage your medical appointments and treatment schedules?

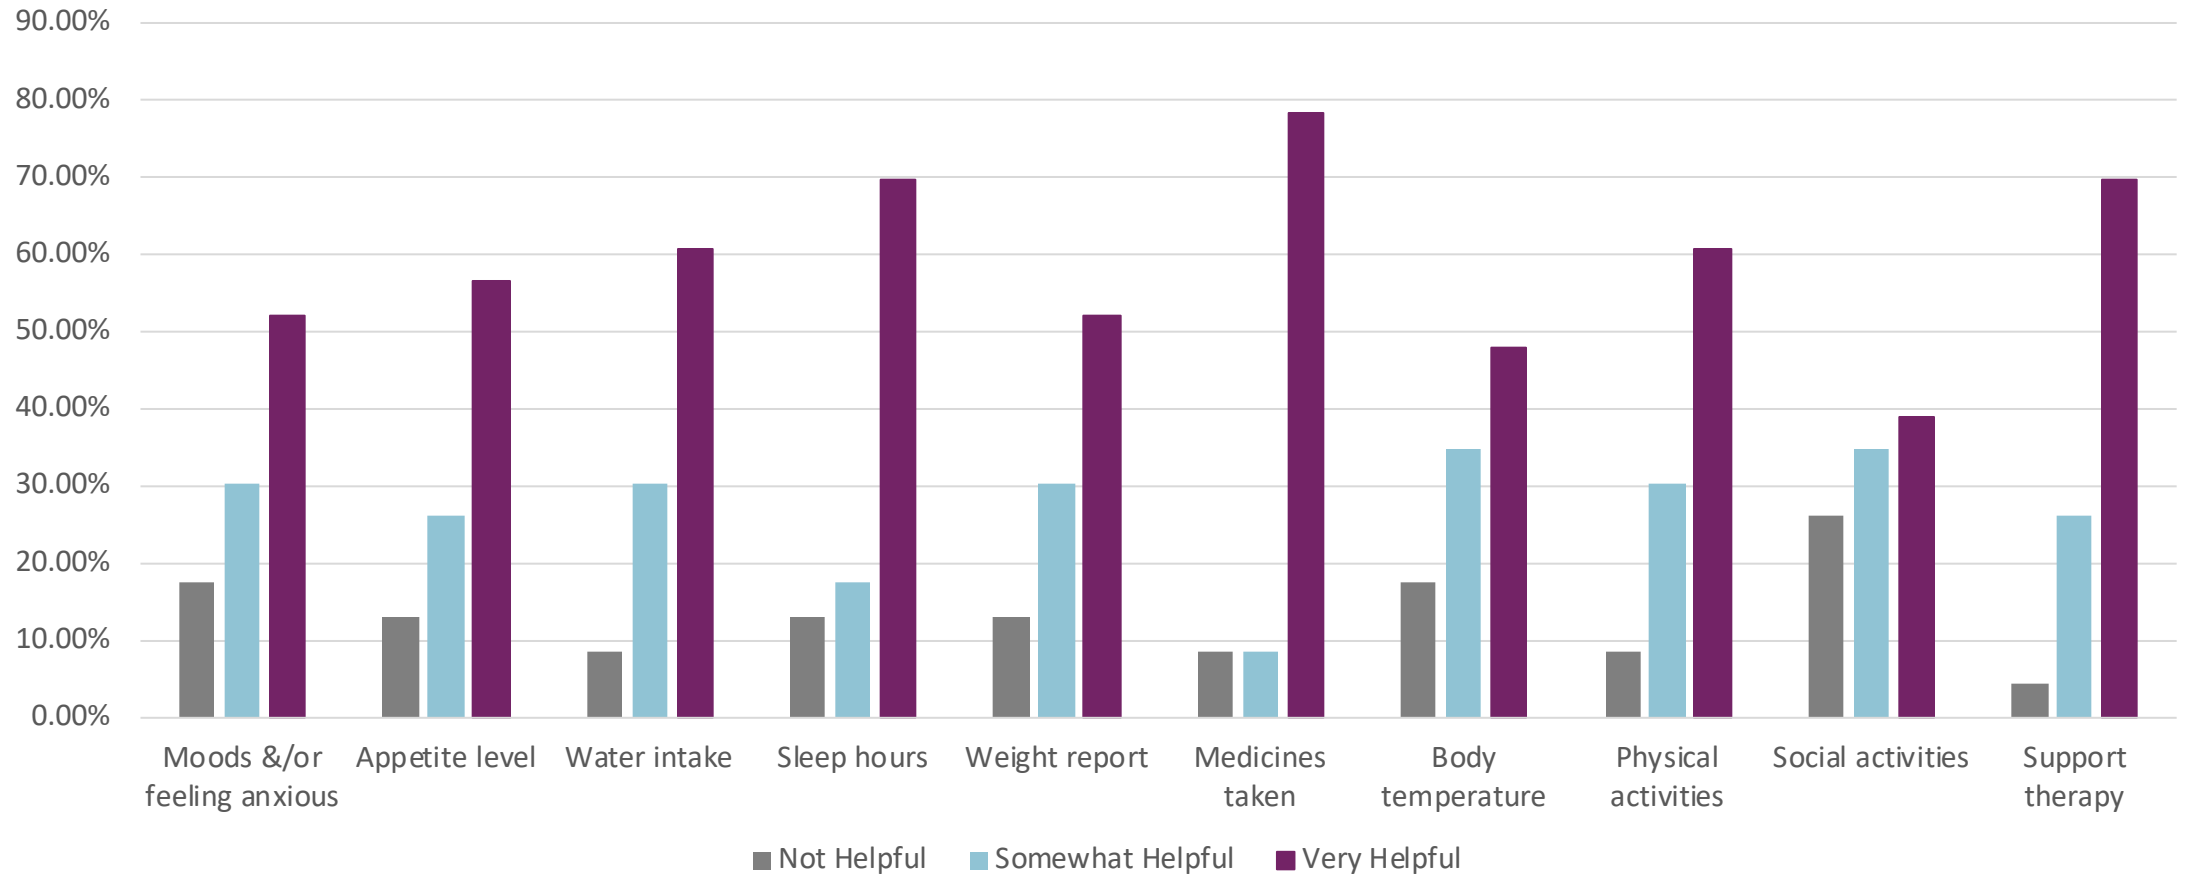

Would you feel comfortable using an app to help manage details of your important contacts?

Would you feel comfortable using an app to track other aspects of your wellbeing such as your sleep, mood, appetite, etc?

What aspects of your wellbeing would you find helpful to track and monitor regularly?

Would you be willing to review and test a pre-release version of your cancer wellness app, and have your say whether it helps you or not?

What aspects of your wellbeing would you find helpful to track and monitor regularly?

- Oxygen Level
- Diet
- Diabetic monitoring (lots of cancer patients are diabetic)
- Blood results
- Food intake
- Bowel movement

What app features and functions would you personally find most helpful and supportive in this type of app?

- “The ability to access my personal test results! To have it all at my fingertips!”
- “Quick links to side-effects of chemo, surgery, radiation, hormone treatment, anaesthetics, and a DIY solution to mitigate symptoms.”
- “I don’t have cancer but I have family and friends that have / had it. I suppose it depends on their viewpoint, so perhaps an extra option of a saying per day or meme or joke or inspiration, perhaps that the background screen can vary or be uploaded. Some people are on a number of pages, I can imagine if you feeling ill you only want to have to post or tweet etc. once, so perhaps an option to post / tweet to various other profiles on other apps or blogs? and an emergency button or swipe if things are bad and you need help, that someone or 3 people can be notified to contact or come asap?”

What app features and functions would you personally find most helpful and supportive in this type of app?

- “I personally have all my husbands test results in a huge notebook.....from diagnosis to almost 3 years later.... I carry it with us constantly....especially to our local ER.... maybe a place to connect to the hospital where I do have all those test results (CT, blood work etc) online.... maybe be able to link them”
- “A place to manage appointments and reminders of those along with a place for notes.”
- “Medical history, stress levels.”
- “Sleep and diet.”
- “Activity and moods.”
- “Medicine reminders.”
